Lab 5 (5 points)

In this lab, you should finish the design of your page

1. Add an internal navigation section to your document
    a. Use "id" attributes to anchor parts of your page
    b. Use  elements to link to the anchors
    c. Hint: the heading elements are a good place to anchor 2. Remember that images are inline elements, make sure at least one of your images is placed as part of your regular text flow (that is, inside a paragraph)
    a. Use the float and width properties to properly display the image
    b. Make sure that your floating elements do not "cling" to the surrounding text 3. If your webpage does not use a centered layout, make a copy of your work and create a centered layout
    a. Do not change the width of the "body" or "html" elements
    b. Make proper use of  and  elements, as well as the class selector
